And I shouldn't mislead you that this is really a big, wide-ranging semi-historical novel.

Group Portrait with Lady by Heinrich Boll

This is a terrific book. It is only by stepping back and away and reflecting on what he writes can you begin to get the whole picture of this book in it's depth, determination and beauty and truth.

Böll uses the structure of an Author Au researching the life of the laconic Leni, the product of an upper middle class German family before the war, educated in a convent, who has been the underachiever-by-purpose. But he's got little bits of insanity to include.
