On June 29 noon position lat. It was recognized that every one whose work allowed turned to immediately on any job which was wanted, but it was an absolutely voluntary duty—Volunteers to shorten sail? This lay, first of all, across half a mile of clear blue ice, swept by the unbroken wind, which met us almost straight in the face. But even as early as this we had spent hours on the pumps, and it was evident that these pumps were going to be a constant nightmare.
