Enabling growth: redistribution priorities for South Africa

A greater share of government initiatives which facilitate technological development, knowledge acquisition and training must directly benefit small and micro enterprise. The rest produce only for household consumption. The ANC is then expected to take its proposal to parliament, where a two-thirds majority is needed to change the constitution.

This must include providing secondary and tertiary referral hospitals, regulating private hospitals, running training facilities and programmes, evaluating and planning services, and any other support the districts may request. Workers are entitled to a holiday period of 21 days' consecutive leave per year, not including South Africa's 12 public holidays.

Ramaphosa: Land redistribution must be accelerated for SA to meet true potential

While blacks account for 80 percent of South Africa's population, the former homelands comprised just 13 percent of the land. The economies had advanced methods of preserving food.

Work Culture in South Africa

Within formal employment, women are discriminated against in many areas such as wages, job security, specific needs of women workers, and employment opportunities. Thus, a society with people of varying ages will have a certain amount of income inequality.
