Opinion: How Biden can fix America's tarnished image

You want a face to blame, blame Ms.

Ezra Klein

Parties have grown increasingly divided in the past years on all major policy dimensions in American politics, Democrats have become more liberal and Republicans have become more conservative and independents are also leaning towards sides now a days. All any of us can do is soberly assess our problems, search for evidence-based solutions, and work toward the plan we think has the best chance of success. Dysfunction in the early 21st century has its causes.

Political gridlock, past and present

We want the same party controlling Congress. If the school had simply been set up as a business it would have been up to the owner how to run it.

Why More Gridlock in Congress is Good for America

We discovered that because politicians think strategically, the ongoing nature of laws is getting in the way of more agreement and action. The Pragmatic Fiscal Governance Pledge I, Name of Candidate , pledge to my constituents and the Citizens of the United States of America that I will: One, lead this nation with an open mind by considering every perspective and solution to resolve all current and future fiscal policy problems without undue prejudice due to my party's ideology and my political interests in being reelected; Two, seriously consider supporting any and all efforts to reduce the national deficit, to a sustainable level, through a balanced approach that includes raising government revenue and cutting government spending on an more or less equal basis, which does not unduly undermine the national security of the United States; Three, do my utmost to reduce or eliminate any and all government spending that do not advance the national interests of the United States in a sustainable manner with all due haste and in a orderly and responsible manner; Four, work hard to ensure that all fiscal reform policies passed by Congress will not unduly undermine or jeopardize the economic prosperity of the United States in the long term by placing an onerous burden on one particular part of society, as all sacrifices must be a shared burden across all parts of America.

Here's How to Reform Congress to Make It Actually Work

Of course, as with all significant reforms, the biggest question is whether any of this can become reality. Challenges and Change Ahead Some will see this as unrealistic. Example, Two friends in a group of two, both have different ideas but neither one wants to do the others idea, that is what you could call political deadlock A recent innovation has been to remove the power of the upper house to block supply, as well as some other bills.

Gridlock

These new Republicans were put into office for two short years.

The Politics Industry: How Political Innovation Can Break Partisan Gridlock and Save Our Democracy

In the public sector, we see gridlock in many varying manifestations--a city and county government that find it difficult to collaborate even when doing so would be in the interests of both; the federal government and states struggling to work out a simple formula by which states produce better results with less money while getting flexibility from the feds in how they do so; or two city department heads who block collaboration because of their mutual rivalry.
