An Extract of Reflection: Recollections of Hugh M'Call (part 3)

The runways at Tempelhof were not long enough. I made sure the captive had his hands tied and went to the mealie field not far from the contact zone and called the chopper in to pick up the captive and myself, which he did and just before last light.

The plight of the cotton weavers

They seemed very sensible of the awful change they were about to make ; and at the same time behaved with the greatest firmness, choosing rather to die than turn informers. On occasions we were inadvertently dropped from altitudes of less than three hundred feet, which gave the parachute barely enough time to open before the ground rushed up to meet you. But there are some negatives too.

The Cotton Hand

I took possession of the webbing and found that it contained a quantity I did not count them of 7. At our stops Nürnberg, Cologne, Hook van Holland we had been greeted by city mayors and other government dignitaries as well as media people and well-wishers. This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important, and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it.

An Extract of Reflection: Extracts from the Records of Old Lisburn XXXIII.

By the end of the war we were working so close to Salisbury that the Andrew Fleming Hospital was normally the destination of choice. We discovered later that it was a Russian armoured personnel carrier APC used by Frente Populares para o Libertação de Moçambique FRELIMO. Father Magee gave £10, and the donation was very much prized by the Presbyterians.
