Parish and Phillimore Marriage records

Each document should have a brief description as to what it is, and if archaic words are used that may be unfamiliar, a short explanation will be added. There is a carved head of King Edward I, on one of the pillars as he is reputed to have visited Bywell on one of his many Scottish forays.

In medieval times Bywell was famous for its ironwork mainly hore related. In 1570 Bywell had 15 shops, but as the ironwork industry dwindled so did the prominence of the town, and in the 19th century am major change occurred when the inhabitants were removed to nearby Stocksfield and the village landscaped to become part of the Bywell Hall parkland.
