Acqua Alta (Commissario Brunetti, #5) by Donna Leon

Some spots in San Marco are extremely low and get flooded even when the tide is not above average. I decided to go with one of Donna Leon's Commissario Brunetti mysteries, a series that I've discovered fairly recently.

Furthermore, the northbound winds called and sirocco often blow directly towards the harbors that connect the lagoon to the Adriatic Sea, significantly slowing down and, at times, completely blocking the outflow of water from the lagoon toward the sea. Paolo and Patrizia got together in Tampa Bay and decided to open a restaurant using Italian cooking techniques to provide a new foodie experience with the commitment to outsource as much local produce as possible to serve healthy and tasty food.
