Cooperative Law

Members allocate surpluses for any or all of the following purposes: developing the cooperative by setting up reserves, part of which should at least be indivisible; benefitting members in proportion to their partonage of the cooperative's bubsiness; and, supporting other activities approved by the membership. The Articles of Cooperation and By-Laws.

Cooperative Law

A farmer cooperative can serve one or more functions including but not limited to providing loans to farmers, supplying information pertinent to agricultural production, selling inputs necessary to agricultural production, bargaining on behalf of its members, providing transportation services, and marketing agricultural products for its members. It buys seed in bulk, and then sells that seed to farmers as needed.

R.A. 9520

Certification of the Secretaries duly attested by the Chairpersons of the Constituent Cooperatives that there was a quorum and the required number of votes for the approval was met; 5. Alternatively, the announcement of the division may also be done by posting in at least three 3 conspicuous public places for three 3 consecutive weeks within its area of operation. For example, a group of tenants might create a housing cooperative, simply by adopting highly participatory and democratic ways of operating.
