The General Prologue

Of simple fustian wore he a jupon Sadly discoloured by his habergeon; For he had lately come from his voyage And now was going on this pilgrimage.

Geoffrey Chaucer (1342

Of twenty year of age he was, I gesse. Of mortal battles he had fought fifteen, And he'd fought for our faith at Tramissene Three times in lists, and each time slain his foe.

The General Prologue

And shortly, whan the sonne was to reste, So hadde I spoken with hem everichon That I was of hir felaweshipe anon, And made forward erly for to ryse, To take oure wey ther as I yow devyse. In stature he was of an average length, Wondrously active, aye, and great of strength.

The General Prologue

The Canterbury Tales, Geoffrey Chaucer, The Canterbury Tales in hypertext, The Canterbury Tales on-line, medieval, mediaeval, middle-english, electronic book, books, Librarian, librarius, literature. In Latvia raided he, and Russia, No christened man so off of his degree. Full worthy was he in his liege-lord's war, And therein had he ridden none more far As well in Christendom as heathenesse, And honoured everywhere for worthiness.

Geoffrey Chaucer (1342

Geoffrey Chaucer (1342

Embrouded was he, as it were a meede Al ful of fresshe floures, whyte and reede.

The General Prologue

He nevere yet no vileynye ne sayde In al his lyf unto no maner wight. He never yet had any vileness said, In all his life, to whatsoever wight.
