Lucile, the First International Couturier

For women, military uniforms had elements of current fashion: the long skirts with tunics or jackets worn over them were reminiscent of civilian dress. Cloth rubbed and marked with wear and tears to spine ends and corners, lean to spine, early plates foxed, frontispiece heavily, one plate loose and edge worn, bookplates to endpapers, inscription to half title - worn but serviceable copy. As a personality Lucile's impression was felt, too.
