Fossil Butte National Monument

The Green River Formation is made up of sediment from Fossil Lake.

Fossil Butte National Monument, Wyoming

At the Visitor Center, the timeline continues to wrap around the porch. A laccolith is a large mass of igneous rock which is intruded through sedimentary rock beds without reaching the surface, but makes a rounded bulge in the sedimentary layers above. This creates soft, light-colored limestone.

Fossil Butte National Monument, Wyoming

With entire walls dedicated to displaying fossilized mammals, plants, birds, insects and more, the visitor center should be part of any Fossil Butte experience. The first known ascent of Devils Tower by any method occurred on July 4, 1893, and is accredited to William Rogers and Willard Ripley, local ranchers in the area. Wikivoyage has a travel guide for.
