The Great Ejection 1662: February 2010

A more impolitic and disgraceful deed never disfigured the annals of a Protestant Church. In 1904 a William Osler began an article in a medical journal on the 17th century medical man Richard Morton thus: August 22, 1662 - Black Bartholomew's Day, as it has been called - brought sadness and sorrow to many English homes. Clark, History of English Nonconformity, London 1911—13.
