Written by Really great Czech film of the 60's.

Moompitchers not to miss: The Fifth Horseman is Fear

Braun through his work, where exaggerated shots lend themselves to symbolic interpretation.

The Fifth Horseman Is Fear [1965]

Braun through his tortured city, where fear eats away at the social structure. Braun is asked for assistance.

Lincoln Center

A quest for leads Dr. Braun at a late night party is suddenly uprooted to a mental asylum; the stylistic association between the two places adds to the overall presentation of occupied Prague as the grotesque stage exhibiting facism. While the material that Brynych himself shot in Italy is, for sure, much tamer than those films, it shares their conflation of political oppression and sexual violation, their fusion of sex and death, and their stimulation of a visceral response through explicit and transgressive spectacle.

DVD review of The Fifth Horseman is Fear (1/2) by Marty Mapes

Braun Miroslav Hajek , who being Jewish is not allowed to practice medicine, but forced to work as a low-level bureaucrat in a giant warehouse that holds the properties confiscated from Jews one of the few indicators that the narrative is set in 1940s. Clocks serves as a symbol for time; and the Jews who lost their clocks also had their time on Earth taken from them. At the ground floor lives a neurotic old lady raising rabbits and hates Nazis.
