Food Safety

Finding More Outbreaks Helps Make Food Safer In recent years, even before WGS became routine, the combination of better methods for detecting outbreaks and wider distribution of foods, which can send contaminated food to many states, led to an increase in the number of multistate foodborne disease outbreaks that CDC and partners detected and investigated. Once risks are assessed, a data security program can be established with practices similar to those that ensure safe, quality products.

Threats to Food Safety

In the absence of a way to measure the threat, most discussions on threats tend to default to individuals defending his or her favorite threat, often to the detriment of getting anything done. Proponents counter that farmers would not be forced to buy the seed.

Are these concerns overstated by health food advocates? Thinking back to the original question I was asked, the only firm conclusion that I can come to is that the threat I understand best climate change is probably NOT the biggest threat — at least in terms of direct effects of climate change on agriculture and food security in the Pacific Northwest. More progress is needed to protect people and reduce foodborne illness in America. The seeds will be deposited in a network of seed banks for use by all member countries, free of charge, for research and experimental plant breeding.
