Saint John the Baptist Parish, Louisiana: Genealogy, Census, Vital Records

The tower is unbuttressed, but the aisles have diagonal buttresses at the corners that on the south-east was probably replaced by a straight buttress in the 15th century, when the chapel was built. The east window is now a late 15th century one with hollowed out side jambs, but in 1907 part of the north side of an original 13th century lancet was uncovered. The contemporary chancel arch has double hollow chamfers and springs from shallow corbels.
