Creation vs. evolution

We need to see the whole picture in order to properly evaluate the smaller portions. It comes out to be about the size of a sheep. If faith affirms that the world has a temporal beginning, can reason demonstrate this must be true? We are not stating that this proves that the layers of the earth's surface were laid down quickly.

For anyone who read this entire page and who does not have a chip on their shoulder, one conclusion should be clear: the evidence strongly favors the Bible's creation account, and does not support the theory of evolution.

Creation vs. Evolution

IOW, I am guessing you are a materialist.

The Christlike God

Without land to break up the tides, all water movement would become very turbulent, mixing the different sizes and species together with trees and other vegetation. And save for a handful of deistic evolutionists, there it has remained.

The Christlike God

Paul spoke of Adam and Jesus as historical persons, recognizing Adam as the beginning of the human race. Millions of Christians accept evolution, which makes me very happy.
