Soviet Nationality Policy, Urban Growth, and Identity Change in the Ukrainian SSR 1923

WILLERTON Patronage and politics in the USSR 8 I JAMES HUGHES Stalin, Siberia and the crisis of the New Economic Policy 80 ILIANA ZLOCH-CHRISTY East-West financial relations Current problems and future prospects 79 MICHAEL D. The Rada found itself in a Catch-22 dilemma: it desperately needed German arms but could not alienate the peasantry, its largest constituency, by abandoning its land reforms. But in light of their ambivalent ideological heritage and the complexity of the situation in the non-Russian areas, the Bolsheviks, especially those in the Ukrainian provinces, were divided over which policies to follow.

The Tenth RKP b Congress, meeting in March 1921, began this process of equalization. As a result of such psychological stress mere convenience favors the use of the dominant language as the lingua franca, thus heightening the incentives to assimilate. The inhabitants of each of these regions experienced imperial integration at different times and under different circumstances.

Because assimilation to Russian and Russian culture was not pervasive in the countryside, these peasants must have been Russian peasants, or resided in mixed Russian-Ukrainian districts bordering the Russian republic.
