These include: i a Central Board of Trustees to administer the EPF, EPS and EDLI Schemes, ii an Employees State Insurance Corporation to administer the ESI Scheme, iii national and state-level Social Security Boards to administer schemes for unorganised workers, and iv cess-based labour welfare boards for construction workers. Because the Social Security tax was , and Social Security benefits were based on how much each individual had paid into the system, the program would not contribute to income redistribution in the way that some reformers, including Perkins, had hoped. What happens with the new rules is that if you suspend your benefits, all benefits based on your record with the exception of benefits for an ex-spouse will also be suspended.

State laws restricting private use of Social Security numbers

The Second National Commission on Labour 2002 NCL had examined existing labour laws and recommended their re-consolidation into broader groups such as industrial relations, wages, social security, safety, and welfare and working conditions. It also includes self-employed workers. They argued that by imposing a tax on employers that could be avoided only by contributing to a state fund, the federal government was essentially forcing each state to establish an unemployment-compensation fund that would meet its criteria and that the federal government had no power to enact such a program.
