The Contributions of Viktor Lowenfeld to Art Education; Part I: Early Influences on His Thought on JSTOR

Their rich legacy, however, is not always readily accessible in a hegemonic, Eurocentric culture that is willingly ready to marginalize other cultures that do not mesh with its own. However, the degree of subjectivity which is one of the primary traits of this stage is not evinced in this student's work.

Early Childhood Development and Kids Art Activities

Lowenfeld visited the Institute for the Blind to validate or disprove Steinberg's approach. Proportions, perspective, and use of space are more accurate.

John T. Biggers; Artist, Educator Chronicled the Black Experience

Lowenfeld as a teacher, the phrasing and word order will have a familiar ring. Individuals conceive of their creative interest as area filled with creative possibilities, filled with promise. Look at a family picture together discussing the people in the picture and interesting characteristics of each person, encouraging his observational skills.

Therefore, this author feels that all children should have learning opportunities and experiences that help them learn to create both realistic and emotionally abstract artwork regardless of their individual dispositions, preferences, and natural abilities.

The Evolution of Self

They employ a random or emotional use of color that does not correlate with real objects. And because of the awareness of lack of ability, the child is less spontaneous and eager to draw as so in comparison to previous stages. Dawning Realism The dawning realism stage occurs between ages 9 and 11.
