By exploring the media's social justice under political constraint, this project contributes to the accumulation of knowledge on the unique practices of deviance-making, prompting a dialog between the two isolated research realms — social deviance and foreign occupation. A missionary group of the Northern Methodist Church led by Henry G.

Far Outliers: Korea Between Empires, 1895

As domestic newspapers came under strict colonial censorship, the San Francisco based Sin Han minbo New Korean Daily became the mouthpiece of the nation. Although the Western powers were perceived as being most advanced along the road of 'civilization and enlightenment,' Korean reformists saw Korea as following Japan in a game of catch up with the West. Paektu, had become acknowledged borders during the Chosŏn period, Koreans still harbored ambitions for Manchurian territory that had once been occupied by Koguryŏ and Parhae.

Gusts Of Popular Feeling: Gaecheonjeol: 99 years young

I also would like to thank Claudia Pederson and Soraya Murray for reading my draft and sharing their ideas, Theminkosi A. Immediately a publishing boom was visible, with 409 permits being given for the publication of magazines and journals in 1920 alone.
