3. First Award, Course Title and Mode of Study:	MA in International Relations; Postgraduate Certificate in International Relations; Postgraduate Diploma in International Relations
4. Normal Duration:	Full time / Part Time FT: 1 year / PT: 2 years
5. UCAS code:	L258
6. Overview and general educational aims of the course
The MA International Relations has three main aims:
(1) To provide an advanced knowledge of the key concepts, frameworks and ideas of International Relations as well as a specialist knowledge of new trends developing in the field of International Relations.
(2) To enable students to understand the link between theoretical understandings of the field and policies and practices in a contemporary world.
(3) To offer students a course of study that will prepare them for their professional aspirations by enabling them to conceptualise and solve problems of their choice via their coursework and dissertation research project or work-based research project.
The course offers an opportunity to take part in an exciting contemporary discussion of international relations that not only focuses on core theoretical understandings of International Relations but on contemporary and critical developments within the field, and especially on how those can be researched and analysed. The course is grounded in theoretical debates and has a strong policy focus on global governance, the link between political economy and security, and the transient nature of international political actors and phenomena. The course is complemented by optional social science modules that will allow you to further specialise in areas such as international health, media, and sustainability hence preparing them for the dissertation research project or work-based research project, in which they can work creatively on topics of their own particular interest, drawing either on a more academic or a more practical context. In completing the MA, you will have the opportunity to design and implement your dissertation research project or work-based research project working closely with supervisory staff.
Nottingham Trent University has operated a successful MA in International Relations since 1992 within the School of Arts and Humanities. The course now sits within the School of Social

Introduction to International Relations: Contemporary Global Issues

Assessment Details 100% Coursework split equally between MT and HT. The first section looks at different approaches to thinking about international relations and world politics and introduces students to the key actors, agents, institutions and ideas that dominate the world today. Central to my argument is my personal experience as both a student within this field and as an individual outside of it.

International Relations and the Study of History

The theory offers solutions to many international problems. He is regarded as the most persuasive advocate of this theory in the post-war era. But exponents of this theory like Snyder hope that the analysis of past occurrences will be the stepping stone towards building a predictive theory.

Contemporary International Relations Frameworks for Understanding 6th Edition

Marxist approaches argue the position of and make the assumption that the economic concerns transcend others; allowing for the elevation of class as the focus of study.
