Indeed, while colonialism interfered with agricultural productivity, globalization, the economics of scale and contentious, ethnic-preferential, and rigged politics contributed directly and indirectly to malnutrition and skewed distribution of resources that left many Africans at the margin of society in their own continent. The harmful impact of the IMF adjustment programs in most of Africa receiving the loans is no longer in dispute. Required employees at the district hospitals include one environmental health officer, a records officer, a dentist, and a pharmacist. The big task is to promote sustainable environmental and social conditions that bring enduring and equitable health gains.
