When skilled craftsmen, most of whom have worked with John Perry for many years, have interpreted, cut and polished the burl and mounted it with a sculpture, the result is a happy marriage of the art of nature and man. The Crooks family has run the post office for nearly a century. Carving the head in wood; step by step instruction.

Degarthe W E

The museum that new technical studies reveal how Degas constructed a number of his wax sculptures up over brass and wire armatures and then building them up with anything he found at hand—wine bottle corks, paper, wood, discarded paint brushes, and even the lid of a salt shaker.
