Moral panic

Crime Media Culture, 7 3 , 245-258. In a survey from April 2000, 63% of Americans with children in grades K—12 believed it was very likely or somewhat likely for a shooting similar to the Columbine massacre to happen in their community. In this sense, we can speak about a semiotics of food; far from simply coinciding with material needs or physiological and perceptive processes, nutrition concerns all the various activities, discourses, and images that are associated with it.

Gofton and Haimes: Necessary Evils?

It is an outstanding investigation of the way in which the media and often those in a position of political power define a condition, or group, as a threat to societal values and interests.
