Led Zeppelin

After the band's previous album received lukewarm reviews from critics, they decided their fourth album would officially be untitled, and would be represented instead by four symbols chosen by each band member, without featuring the name or any other details on the cover.

Led Zeppelin

The group worked on this album while on the road, so many of the songs were recorded at separate times rather than in one sitting. It became the centrepiece of the group's live set from 1971 onwards; in order to replicate the changes between acoustic, electric and twelve-string guitar on the studio recording, Page played a double neck guitar during the song. It was reworked for Page and Plant's 1994 album.

Led Zeppelin IV

At one point, it was ranked as one of the top five.

Robert Plant

It was recorded live in the studio, and arranged in a slower and more laid-back style compared to some of the other material on the album. The self-funding was important because it meant they could record exactly what they wanted without record company interference.

Led Zeppelin IV

Plant bought a Welsh sheep farm in 1973, and began taking Welsh lessons and looking into the mythology of the land such as , , etc. The group includes singer , singer-guitarist , multi-instrumentalist and vocalist , bassist-vocalist Byron House, and drummer-percussionist-vocalist.
