Ireland's Famine Children "Born at Sea"

He spent more than a year preparing Connaught for plantation, which makes a mockery of the allegation that a Cromwell had driven people into barren wilderness. We must remember that the evidence come primarily from Vere Hunt himself so that he is likely to exaggerate both his achievements and problems. A sojourn in Southampton where he was appointed to a colonency in the 135th regiment at the time, the newspaper states, when the British Empire was involved in greatest peril.
