The collection shows Duffy's growth as a writer, and I am definitely interested in picking up Rapture her most recent collection which centres around love and which I have a feeling will be even more to my liking as Duffy seems to be at her best when she is writing passionately. New Selected Poems was an uneven collection for me, with my favourite selection being from The World's Wife although there were quite a few other gems throughout.

I find it difficult to read poetry for pleasure, rather than studying individual poems. For unadulterated sensuality, I refer you to any number of poems by Nuala Ní Dhomhnaill, although Fáilte bhéal na Sionna don iasc does end on a surprisingly tender note: Is seinnim seoithín do mo leannán tonn ar thonn leathrann ar leathrann, mo thine ghealáin mar bhairlín thios faoi mo rogha a thoghas fén ón iasach. It was written to his on-off lover Lily Brik.

Selected early poems : Simic, Charles, 1938

There's a beautiful one in which Pa Broon, inspired by Bill Clinton and Monica Lewinsky, demands oral sex from Ma Broon.
