Towards the year 1560, nearly all the religious of the convent of Nazareth at Cologne were seized with violent convulsive hysterical attacks, and other ner- vous affections, attended with delirium of a most dis- tressing kind. The majority ag-reed that the form of abjuration should be read to her ; the will of God should be proclaimed to her ; and then she should be given up to the justice of the temporal power: that is to say, to death by burning! The questions were put to the accused with obvious artifice, and a design to embarrass her ; they were without coanection, order 154 JEANNE D'aRC.

Tbey pretended that it was a kind of wicbcraft. It would seem, in such cases, as if there was a period clearly defined, up to which date the mind will be found in a fit state to receive new ideas of a sane kind; but from a particukr time, there will be no entrance for them : no tabula rasa for Ihem to be written on or retained.

Here we find a striking contradiction, that the holiest gift of the Church should be received by her who at that very time was condemned to be cut off from the Church as a withered branch. On the trial of Jeanne d'Arc, her judges laid this alleged miracle to her charge as a claim to divine power. On Sunday, September 4th, the King's troops made an attack in the direction of Porte St.
