This reflects a relative lack of new energy efficiency policies and of efforts to tighten existing measures. The region remains by far the largest net provider of oil to world markets, as well as an important exporter of LNG. Even higher deployment is possible if offshore wind becomes the foundation for the production of low-carbon hydrogen.

The future of energy: Taking on tomorrow

Taking on tomorrow in an effective way will require companies to blend insight into the future with the reality of today. There was the notion that the League of Nations had failed. Congress, meaning that a U.

'Decisions we make today will shape tomorrow's world'

Global energy scenarios created by IIASA and WEC provide the context for the risk analysis. Initiatives from individuals, civil society, companies and investors can make a major difference, but the greatest capacity to shape our energy destiny lies with governments.

'Decisions we make today will shape tomorrow's world'

The faltering momentum behind global energy efficiency improvements is cause for deep concern. England was up against the wall and the wily Stalin understood the geopolitical underpinnings of his pact with Hitler were rendered moot.
