He rarely used a car, and if he went by car, he usually drove it himself.

Armen Dzhigarkhanyan

On close inspection, the two plots, of 'Monter' and its intertext--Zoshchenko's frame narrative story, on the one hand, and Glinka's 'play within a play,' on the other-- exhibit telling parallels. Came out in three parts.

Movies Part 31

The only recourse left, short of dismissing the story as a mere sketch about the goings-on in a provincial company, would be to invoke the general Zoshchenkovian 'ambivalence,' blanketing the cultural failures of all parties involved.
