The Barons' War

In this direction there is no river, nor was there one in the XIth century, as the soil proves. The result was unavoidable: the interests of the new Norman conquerors and the interests of the old English establishment were incompatible.

The Barons' War

In his chamber, weak and dying, Was the Norman baron lying; Loud, without, the tempest thundered And the castle-turret shook, In this fight was Death the gainer, Spite of vassal and retainer, And the lands his sires had plundered, Written in the Doomsday Book. He also joined the 4th Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire militia in 1894 and served in the.
