Last Night a DJ Saved My Life: The History of the Disc Jockey

The musicians didn't want to see records put them out of a job; the record companies were afraid that hearing records played on the radio would stop people from going out and buying them; and ASCAP, the publishing organization, didn't want its songs broadcast without greater and greater royalties. It also made number 5 in Switzerland, number 12 in Austria and number 25 in New Zealand.
