Preventive care benefits for children

Imagine being a teenager grappling with the transition into adolescence and independence all alone. However, as long as flu viruses are circulating, vaccination should continue throughout flu season, even in January or later.

About the children

Some people may also have vomiting and diarrhea, which are more common in children than adults. These teens need support, guidance, and family now and for the rest of their lives. Other Preventive Actions In addition to getting a flu vaccine, children and caregivers of young children should take the same CDC recommends for everyone, including avoiding people who are sick, washing hands often, and covering coughs.

Preventive care benefits for children

This will ensure that your child is protected before flu starts circulating in your community.

Flu & Young Children

Since 2004-2005, flu-related deaths in children reported to CDC during regular flu seasons have ranged from 37 to 188 deaths. The fact is that we have been using kid to refer to a child that is human, rather than goatish, for more than three hundred years now.

About the children

Bringing people together to end poverty We are proud to work alongside and are inspired by their support in helping children in poverty. Types of flu vaccines for children During the current flu season, CDC recommends annual influenza vaccination for everyone 6 months and older with any licensed, age-appropriate flu vaccine.

Children & Families

How many children are awaiting adoption in the United States? When Should Children get a Flu Vaccine Children should be vaccinated every flu season for the best protection against flu. The best way to protect these children is for their mother to get a flu shot during pregnancy and for people around them to get vaccinated, as well. This includes children at high risk of developing complications from flu illness, and adults who are close contacts of those children.
