The Cambridge History of African and Caribbean Literature

I Will Marry was of course not a single-authored piece but was co-created over six months with some 200 people in the community of Kamiriithu, and that creation process took place in Gikuyu, so the English language text Alemsegued worked from would necessarily have lost some of its linguistically situated piquancy and bite. During the play, for instance, when peasants addressed certain injustices, they were no longer acting out theoretical or fictionalized grievances. Gikuyu opened up localized resources.
