In recognition of his services, Morley was granted the patent, previously held by his master, of printing books of music and selling ruled paper. His last volume of original compositions was The First Booke of Ayres 1600. A brief review of the theoretical principles left by Giosseffo Zarlino 1517-1590 and Jean Philippe Rameau 1683-1764 , included in the next chapter, gives us an insight into the harmonic equipment used in each of the seven treatises while in chapter v, a general survey accomplishes a similar result with regard to the subject of tonality.
