A brief history of Medicare in America

But when a colleague offers an educated opinion or shares insights into what's going on, they tend to pay more attention. If we do nothing about reforming Medicare, the most likely choices are to raise taxes on working families or to increase premiums dramatically for seniors. Harry Truman and his wife, Bess.,

The Politics of Medicare

In 1965, Black newborns were four times more likely to die of pneumonia and gastroenteritis than white newborns. My observation is that such support is rare.
