Many of these objects were sold in London to defray the cost of the expedition. According to history, Benin Art originated from the powerful ancient Benin kingdom, located in the south-south region of Nigeria.

Benin Kingdom

Brass staffs and clappers surmounted by birds appeared during commemorating ceremonies. The new order imposed at once evokes the personal history of the objects, whilst simultaneously creating a new language that transcends their original function or history. Akenzua and Eresoyen compared themselves to Ozolua and Esigie, starting the tradition of viewing Ozolua and Esigie as two of the most important kings in Benin history.
