East Africa Regional Development Cooperation Strategy

Gosselin, who had joined us in the capacity of a missionary artisan, handled with equal skill the hammer of the stone-cutter and the mattock of the husbandman. The United Nations Mission in the Central African Republic and Chad MINURCAT initially consisted of 350 military and police personnel, but as the conflict continued, the UN Security Council sent more troops, bringing the number to 5,200 by 2010.

A peace deal signed in 2000 ended the two-year territorial war.

European missionaries in southern Africa: the role of the missionaries

The second UN mission in the DRC began in 1999 and has been ongoing ever since. The United Missionary Conference reports for 1884 consistently show that all these practices were still prevalent throughout southern Africa despite a missionary presence in some areas dating back over four generations United Missionary Conference 1889.

The conflict, which dragged from 1993 to 2006, was caused by the age-old tensions between the Hutu and Tutsi ethnic groups in the country. Even today the amaXhosa is not a Christian nation. As part of the agreement, the United Nations Operations in Mozambique ONUMOZ was established to help implement the peace deal, as well as to monitor a ceasefire, the demobilisation of foreign forces, and the national electoral process.

This includes one new mission—the Mozambique Beira Mission. They have gradually begun to replace the native hut with stone or brick cottages, which offer a greater resemblance to European houses; finally they have begun to imitate them in their habits and their mode of life.

East Africa Regional Development Cooperation Strategy

The second mission, which ended in 1995, was created to monitor peace agreements and oversee the ceasefire of 1990.

The box of tools that we had brought from Europe was opened, and my two fellow-workers and myself took each of us a hatchet and a saw. The attachment of Gosselin to the party was an inspired piece of fore-planning on the part of the French. After two years of negotiations in Rome, the two parties eventually signed a General Peace Agreement on the 4th of October, 1992.
