Cable car

Most of the victims of this disaster were West Germans. Learn about San Francisco's cable cars before you ride! Many people at the time viewed horse-drawn transit as unnecessarily cruel, and the fact that a typical horse could work only four or five hours per day necessitated the maintenance of large numbers of horses that had to be fed, housed, groomed, medicated and rested.

San Francisco's cable cars are part of the city's identity. We need a plan to bring them back soon

I recently heard from Jonathan Milne, who grew up in and just remembers the cable trams before World War II, but now lives in Canada. I do not have a cable layout as yet? The building of this line was promoted by with design work by , and it was first tested in 1873. One of the best spots is between the rows of benches at the back, just behind the grip where you can see out and also watch them work.
