The British Columbian, Weekly Edition

It is necessary to speak plainly on this important matter. Some noble lines of the poet James Nicholson are well worthy of record :— Our homes are invaded with dark desolation, There's danger wherever the wine-cup doth flow; Then pledge your fair hands to resist the temptation, Nor stain your red lips with those waters of woe.

He said:- I have lived at 29 Hanbury Street for about a fortnight, and I am a carman for Mr Wisdom of Leadenhall Market. There is a porter who lodges there, and who generally leaves home about half past three. It would be their task to make the history of the future; to construct a new civilization by blending the best elements of their own culture with the maturer results of Roman experience.

The Statute of Winchester defined the law as to Watch and Ward as heretofore, and although of course its precise regulations were no longer adhered to in detail, but modified continually with the changing circumstances of the times, no fresh authoritative declaration was issued on the subject. And, once more,— I'll pledge thee not in wassail bowl, With rosy madness filled; But let us quaff the nobler wine, By Nature's hand distilled.

Augustae Vindelicorum, 1837 ; Scheicher-Binder, Praktisches Handbuch des kath. Still, there are remarkable circumstances which appear to justify the assumption that the same hands not only perpetrated the atrocities yesterday, but was guilty also of two if not of more of the recent undiscovered Whitechapel murders. But, prisoner, you must know that in England there is not one law for the rich and another for the poor.
