50 Great Websites for Parents of Children with Special Needs

We see behaviors that we seek to modify, not categorize. Also in the article, it discusses the importance of having an understanding of what the parents are going through and struggles that they may encounter at home.

Exceptional Children

They can also write down their thoughts and someone else attending the conference can read this out for them.

Collaborating with Families

Parents from culturally diverse backgrounds should be encouraged to join parent organizations and share their cultural points of view. Facebook Pages : The Community of Practice for Supporting Families with Disabilities is a place to share resources and knowledge and to discuss issues. Transitions School transitions, whether from one level of schooling to another such as from elementary to middle school or into a new school such as after family relocation , are stressful for all families.

State Forms & Directions — Exceptional Children

School counselors will be best served by acting from the assumption that parents care about their children and their education. Just as it is unwise to generalize about students as if all students were the same or about parents as if all parents or all families were the same, so it is unwise to generalize about all parents of children with special needs, making the assumption that they are all the same.

Communicating with Culturally Diverse Parents of Exceptional Children

Reston, VA: The Council for Exceptional Children. By consciously practicing active listening skills such as paraphrasing, summarizing, and clarifying, educators gain valuable information from family members and validate the importance of family participation in the educational process. Printable records will help parents and teachers plan for the student's future by tracking goals and outcomes of each interaction.

Communicating with Culturally Diverse Parents of Exceptional Children

In addition to support groups, I think the parents should have a strong relationship with the school counselor because we need to be the ones advocating for their child when no one else will.
