“The Public Has The Right to be Protected From A ...

The Catholic Church in the early 19th century was overwhelmingly French Canadian, so when more significant numbers of Irish Catholics began settling in , the Church had to adapt. Hundreds of poor people, men, women, and children, of all ages, from the drivelling idiot of ninety to he babe just born; huddled together without light, without air, wallowing in filth and breathing a fetid atmosphere, sick in body, dispirited in heart ... ; the fevered patients lying between the sound ... ; by their agonised ravings disturbing those around them and predisposing them, though the effects of the imagination, to imbibe the contagion; living without food or medicine except as administered by the hand of casual charity; dying without the voice of spiritual consolation, and buried in the deep without the rites of the church. Throughout the Lowlands, new churches were built to accommodate the Irish — this contributed to the transformation of the urban landscape too.

What I learned tracing the steps of Irish Famine migrants

Fronting a series of unmarked trenched graves amounting to 5,000 souls, an etched glass sail bears a roll call of the dead. Eleemosynary aid... would be a curse instead of a benefit; and hence it was absolutely necessary to teach the people of the Highlands that they must depend on their resources for the future. With the population reduced, the area could be made more resilient against future crises by giving crofters greater security of tenure so giving them some incentive for agricultural improvement , by instruction in agriculture and the management of stock, and by better education.

Remembering 20,000 Famine refugees who died in 1847

This was especially true after the Conservative Prime Minister Robert Peel was replaced by the Liberal Sir John Russell after an election in 1847. Thus the 1840s Clearances were reminiscent of Irish evictions during that same period.
