U.S. proclaims neutrality in World War I

By the end of August 1914, it seemed as if Europe had dragged the entire world into war. .

Chapter 34: Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Shadow of War

Meanwhile, I have had two conversations with him which enable me to inform you of his views regarding the European situation and to give a survey of Washington's policy.

APUSH Topic Sheet

Conclude this activity by holding a class discussion in which students deliberate this important issue. All over the country, unnecessary activity comes to a halt as millions of families gather in their living rooms next to bulky, polished-wood Philco, RCA, and Emerson radio consoles. Whatever the inconvenience and delays experienced in our trade with the northern European neutrals, American foreign commerce was deriving rich profits.

Germany and American neutrality, 1939

I consider it my duty to inform you of all the aforesaid because I believe that collaboration with Ambassador Bullitt in such difficult and complicated times may prove useful to us. Both were aristocrats and thorough internationalists who shared definite views on how to remake the world and a conviction that they were destined to bring about that grand reorganization. As the Axis forces expanded their territorial holdings in Europe and Asia, Americans debated whether to aid the Allied powers economically or militarily.

On This Day, Sept. 5: FDR declares U.S. neutrality in WWII

Journal Information Current issues are now on the Chicago Journals website.

Digital History

Seven decades later, that simple but unassailable fact continues to elude the public, masses of written scholarship, and most historians. He said he couldn't see any alternative, that he had tried every way he knew to avoid war.
