Finally Fiametta is summoned home, to marry a royal husband. The opera is full of genuine comedy which is generously furnished by the superstitious Lambertucci, who sees dreadful signs and portents in every occurrence; by Checco the beggar and by Peronella, the elderly sister of Lambertucci, who is engaged in hunting a rich husband. He fancies that by his adventures he may gain such experience that he, too, may write of life as Boccaccio does.
