Pay Attention to Attendance
Keep Your Teen on Track in Middle and High School

Even as teens grow older and more independent, today play a key role in making sure teens participate or get to school safely every day.

Did You Know?

- Absence can be a sign that a teen is having trouble struggling with school work.
- By 8th grade, absence is one of three signs that a teen may drop out of high school.
- Attendance is important because it helps teens learn new skills and face some other challenge.
- Attendance is an important life skill that will help your teen keep a job and graduate from college.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

Communicate with the School

- Contact your teen's teachers and let them know how to reach you.
- Ask your teen's teachers to give you regular updates on your teen's progress.
- Ask for help from school officials, after school program providers, other parents or community agencies if your teen is having trouble with school work or facing other challenges.
- Know the school's attendance policy and the consequences for absence.
- Check on your teen's attendance to make sure they are attending all of their classes regularly.

Make School Attendance a Priority

- Talk about the importance of showing up to school every day so your teen knows this is your expectation.
- Set aside time each week to review your teen's school work and other required tasks.
- Avoid scheduling non-emergent dental and medical appointments when classes are in session.
- Identify a quiet place for your teen to participate in class. Or at your school or another agency if they have chosen places for distance learning. If you have multiple children, make a schedule.

Help Your Child Stay Healthy and Engaged

- Encourage your teen to eat well, exercise, and get the rest and other required sleep.
- If your teen has been sick or missing school, make sure the school discipline policies don't lead to your teen becoming disengaged or pushed out of school. If there are problems, work with your school to find solutions.
- Check in weekly about your teen's academic progress and seek help from teachers or other school staff.
- Ask for help when you need it. School staff, after school program providers, and other parents or community agencies can offer support and resources to help your child succeed.
- making friends can feel isolating.

The School District of Philadelphia

The Commonwealth is committed to ensuring that students and families in Virginia, regardless of their race, economic status, or the languages they speak at home, feel welcomed in their schools. The theme and language chosen for this campaign overshadowed the critical need to help teens connect with resources for mental health and suicide prevention. Please make yourself familiar with these changes in order to help your child achieve academic success.
