Immigrants pay more in federal taxes than they receive in tax-supported services, but have a deficit with state and local governments. What happens over the lifetime of an immigrant and his or her children? That black student progress slowed after 2003 on both the LTT and Main NAEP, but slowed relatively more on the more cognitively challenging Main NAEP than on the basic-skills-focused LTT, is consistent with but does not prove a story that excessive basic-skills focus at the expense of reasoning began with the 2003 implementation of No Child Left Behind. What was clear is that addressing class and racial inequality will require big structural changes that are likely to be met with opposition from those outside of, and even within, the working class.

Great Migration

The transition to a majority-minority population in 2043 means that although the non-Hispanic white population will remain the largest single group in America, the combined populations of all nonwhite racial and ethnic groups will make up more than half of the U. If the purpose of immigration policy is to benefit natives by reducing their tax burden, migration policy should favor the admission of young and well educated immigrants who know the host country language and have jobs waiting for them.
