Article 21 Legal effects of reservations and of objections to reservations 1.

(PDF) Spencer C. Tucker, Paul G. Pierpaoli, Jr., Timothy C. Dowling, and Priscilla Roberts, eds. The Cold War The Definitive Encyclopedia and Document Collection. Santa Barbara: ABC

For the purposes of paragraph 1: a the initialling of a text constitutes a signature of the treaty when it is established that the negotiating States so agreed; b the signature ad referendum of a treaty by a representative, if confirmed by his State, constitutes a full signature of the treaty.

The report of the Commission, including any conclusions stated therein regarding the facts or questions of law, shall not be binding upon the parties and it shall have no other character than that of recommendations submitted for the consideration of the parties in order to facilitate an amicable settlement of the dispute. The termination of a treaty, its denunciation or the withdrawal of a party, may take place only as a result of the application of the provisions of the treaty or of the present Convention. A version of the treaty in a language other than one of those in which the text was authenticated shall be considered an authentic text only if the treaty so provides or the parties so agree.

Paragraphs 1 to 3 do not apply to provisions relating to the protection of the human person contained intreaties of a humanitarian character, in particular to provisions prohibiting any form of reprisals againstpersons protected by such treaties. Except where a particular text prevails in accordance with paragraph 1, when a comparison of theauthentic texts discloses a difference of meaning which the application of articles 31 and 32 does notremove, the meaning which best reconciles the texts, having regard to the object and purpose of thetreaty, shall be adopted. Failing any such provision or agreement, a treaty enters into force as soon as consent to be bound bythe treaty has been established for all the negotiating States.
