

Common and aboriginal names of Western Australian plant species

Wildflower Society of Western Australia, Eastern Hills Branch - Categories of Plant Name in use at the WA Herbarium

Description: -

- Federal aid to day care centers -- United States
- Child care services -- Law and legislation -- United States
- Latin language, Medieval and modern -- Dictionaries -- Australian.
- Latin language, Medieval and modern -- Dictionaries -- English.
- Australian languages -- Dictionaries -- Latin, Medieval and modern.
- English language -- Dictionaries -- Latin, Medieval and modern.
- Plants -- Australia -- Western Australia -- Nomenclature.
- Plant names, Popular -- Australian.
- Plant names, Popular -- Australia -- Western Australia. Common and aboriginal names of Western Australian plant species
- Common and aboriginal names of Western Australian plant species

Notes: Includes bibliographical references (p. [3]-[7]).
This edition was published in 1993

Filesize: 14.31 MB

Tags: #McGarvie's #list #and #Aboriginal #Dyarubbin

WA Native Plants

Other groups with restricted areas of less than 70,000 square kilometres include tropical or temperate rainforest and , tall or open eucalypt forests, and Casuarina forests, and woodlands and heath. This one is great in a mixed garden bed or as a low growing hedge; prune lightly after flowering to maintain a neat compact shape. These youerns are frequently found in ants' nests, constructed of straw or leaves, with minute portions of sand.

How to identify weeds

All rushes and sedges have tubers that can be eaten raw.

Common and Aboriginal names of Western Australian plant species / by Eleanor M. Bennett

Kangaroo paws do best in slightly acidic soils with good drainage and full sun exposure. The soft white starch of the young shoot can also be eaten raw and the left over fibres can be spun into tough string. Specimen caught May 3, 1841.

Western Australia

The common brush possum, known by the Aborigines as comal, gumal, kumal see Appendix 1 , was taken and eaten by them; that the ringtail possum, known as nworra see Appendix 1 , was taken at King George Sound can only be inferred from the statement by Nind 1831, p. Sharks, sting-rays and maiden-rays were sometimes caught, but it seems that this was done mainly for sport as they were not eaten Grey 1841, vol. Amongst the most ancient species of flowering hardwood trees are the , including , swamp and oaks, and represented in Australia by three species of

Related Books

- Topics in advanced econometrics - estimation, testing, and specification of cross-section and time series
- Take a funny turn - an autobiography
- Vom Freud bis Drewermann - Tiefenpsychologie und Religionspädagogik
- Opernye libretto - kratkoe izlozhenie soderzhaniia oper.
- Impacts of emerging agricultural trends on fish and wildlife habitat