George III

The Stamp Act was one of the main reasons why the colonists questioned the British Crown and Parliament over the issue of taxation without representation. OK for modern celebrities etc, but not logical in era of male primogeniture when female issue was generally excluded from inheritance. In 1556 Philip II 1556-1598 had inherited the possessions of the Hapsburg dynasty in the Netherlands and nearly half of Italy, as well as Spanish holdings in the New World.

Acts of the Parliament of the United Kingdom/George III

The people in support of this move have cited multiple article naming policies that support this move.

Bridgerton: 10 Movies & TV Shows Which Feature The British Royal Family

That's a little hyperbolic don't you think? This was a neutral matter so far as King George III was concerned. I'm not the one being disingenuous here.
