Unions fracture over climate

In Pennsylvania, Democratic state lawmakers by AFL-CIO, Building Trades and International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers' support of a bill that would block the state from joining the Regional Greenhouse Gas Initiative, a cap-and-trade program to reduce emissions from the power sector.

The Climate Strikers Walked Out of School. Next, Let's Walk Off the Job.

In labor markets that are overwhelmingly nonunion as most are today and in which a growing percentage of the work force moves between jobs, firm-by-firm organizing is inadequate. One is, how might sectorial bargaining look in the public employee rounds such as public education or, say, hospitals? In the conference room, a ten-foot-long scroll chronicles the Stamford effort's recent history, with multicolored stars marking campaign benchmarks and victories.

Going on Offense During Challenging Times

A very special thank you to Mary Kay Henry, the international president of the Service Employees International Union. Dorian Warren: I want to follow up here and just note the argument you make in the book about unions as a public good. David Madland: Well, I think a key in several ways is that getting workers in motion and organized and, actually, demanding change is essential in every way.

Why Unions Must Recommit to Expanding Their Base

If Joe Biden wins in November, he will be under pressure to enact major climate action similar to the Green New Deal, which many national labor union leaders oppose.

Compliance Matrix

Our colleagues in the labor movement worked with labor-friendly legislators to deliver their support. How do we overcome the constraints there? Schnur, Chris Warland, and Melissa Young. Framework for an Equity-Centered National Subsidized Employment Program Heartland Alliance: January 12, 2021. It took us eight years, after 20 years of bargaining with three individual hospitals in that system; so, it was a combined fight.

ERIC

And so, I wanted to research and look at lessons from around the world, U.
